PEGGING THE POUND.
WATCH ABLE JAPAN.
HENRY FORD RESUME $6
EUGENE DIES, AGAIN.

—By Arthur Brisbane—(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

FRENCH AND AMERICAN bankers urge the British to "peg" their pound at some definite price, the higher the better, and do it quickly.

British bankers remember that France cheerfully "pegged" her franc, at 20 per cent of its value, and paid debts with these baby francs.

They know that, the lower the pound falls, the easier it will be for them to pay off their main debt of thirty-two and a half billions of dollars.

If they could imitate France and reduce the pound by 80 per cent, they, like the French, could pay off debts on a 20 per cent basis. They will not do that, but may follow the French reduction half way.

WHILE THE WORLD goes its way, "pegging" pounds, or talking about depression, and other minor things, Japan is making such minor worries seem unimportant.

Japan is in Manchuria, where she invested more than a billion dollars, and Japan intends to stay there.

Russia, resenting what she calls "Japan's impudence," sends more troops close to the Japanese troops.

It seems incredible that Russia should risk success for her five year plan in a war, but anything is possible. Japan, having defied the League of Nations, would not hesitate to do the same to Russia. WATCH THE EAST.

HENRY FORD has resumed his minimum pay of $6 a day. It is remembered that Mr. Ford added $1 to the $6 after the depression began, as his contribution in an emergency.

Mr. Ford has not reduced wages, he has cancelled an extraordinary increase made under extraordinary circumstances.

It is to be remembered, also, by intelligent workers, that the minimum wage of $6 a day, now restored, was established by Ford when it meant an advance of 100 per cent in general wages.

Henry Ford's voluntarily increase of $1 a day after the Wall street panic, costing him in 22 months, in extra wages, $35,100,101, amounts to more than all other "depression" contributions put together.

"CONJUNTO SEMME VARIE." "Often woman is different."

Woman, discovered the Empress Eugenie hat. Hat factories started up, thousands of hats were made in haste; overnight almost every woman had an Empress Eugenie hat on her head, and was looking with one eye, under the brim.

Very often woman saw that every other woman had an Empress Eugenie hat, down on one eye, on the other. Now no woman wants an Empress Eugenie hat. The fashion is as dead as the empress herself.

Hatmakers complain bitterly and wonder what else they can invent to make an appeal to woman's fancy.

LET US HOPE the foolish little skulls will not, come back. There is no beauty in them for the women, no profit for merchants.

QUAKERS DEFEAT WELLSVILLE IN THRILLING TILT

Trick Forward Pass Play
In Second Period Gives
Team 6-0 Triumph

ED BECK CROSSES
LINE WITH SCORE

Victory Gives Stonemen
6th Consecutive Flag
In Football Race

An intelligent, fighting Salem High football machine battled an overwhelmingly heavy and powerful Wellsville schoolboy gridiron product to a standstill, at Rell's stadium Friday night, produced a spectacular touchdown play in closing seconds of the first half and won, by a 6-0 score, the Columbiana county championship for a sixth consecutive season.

4,000 Attend Game

A contest packed with thrills of the most spectacular forms was displayed to more than 4,000 spectators as the two teams, as evenly matched as two grid elevens might be, clashed in their 22 annual football duel. Furiously fought throughout, the contest will go down in county history as one of the finest played games seen here in years.

Salem, playing a superior type of offensive ball with its forward wall sharing equal honors with the scintillating backfield quartet composed of Capt. Ed Beck, Jack Carpenter, Gordon Keyes and John French, fully earned its victory. Outweighed almost 20 pounds to a man, the Quaker line displayed a keen ability to withstand the on-rushing Tiger gladiators when strong defenses meant prevention of scores while the offensive forces, mixing a dazzling end-running onslaught with a fine aerial attack, played brilliantly throughout.

Trick Play Wins Game

The play that brought victory to the Red and Black was the high spot of the battle, if a feature play could be elected from such a thrill-packed encounter. Introduced only this week to his players by Coach Floyd W. Stone, it was used but once by the Quakers but it resulted in the deciding touchdown of the fracas.

There were only two seconds left in the second quarter, time enough for one scrimmage play, when the Salemites had the Tigers backed on their own 14-yard line. The Quakers lined up in regular formation, the ball was passed to French, battering ram, fullback, who heaved a perfect spiral to Carpenter, running around right end, suddenly pivoted, hurled the pigskin to Ed Beck and the team's captain eluded four Wellsville tacklers to plant the ball back of the goal-line for the touchdown. The extra point failed and the half ended on the first play after the kickoff.

Salem Line Shines

True greatness of the Salem line was portrayed to spectators for the first time in the second period after Wellsville through slashing end runs by Weekley and Petrella carried the ball to the Quaker's four-yard stripe. With the pigskin on the eight-yard mark the Tigers ad-

NAVY LEAGUE HUNTS FRIENDS

The Navy League, a private organization, has foregone discretion and incited President Hoover in a statement condemning the administration's naval policy. The league has accused Mr. Hoover of allowing humanitarian and Pacific intentions to lead him into exhibiting an "abysmal ignorance" of why navies are maintained. His proposal to immunize seaborne food supplies during war time, if carried out, would make "for bigger and bloodier wars," the league accuses. It declares that the American naval policy is being "subordinated" to the policies of other naval powers. This is the navy league's way of hunting for friends out in the great beyond where people never see ships, except in pictures, and wonder when they hear the phrase "big navy," who the United States is preparing to fight. The league must actually believe that the public is going to jump up and down in admiration for its impudence to the chief executive of the nation. Certainly nothing less than that could have tempted it into making such a rash play for favor.

It will be disappointed. The people haven't anything in particular to hold against the navy league, but they don't like the tone of its accusation that President Hoover has no right to make decisions about naval affairs. They can easily muster a round of applause for Mr. Hoover's demand that the navy league spokesman apologize for his accusation. If there's going to be a fight in Washington between the President and the "big navy" group, the "hinterlands" will line up behind the men they elected to run the government, not the private group that is trying to run him. The people haven't anything against the navy, but they are developing a hearty dislike for the navy league.

What Others Say

LOST LETTERS

Now and then something occurs to arouse fresh speculation as to how far events may be changed by the failure of letters to reach their intended recipients. Here was the old song, "And the letter that he longed for never came." If our memory is good there was tragedy of a sort in that affair. Errant missives! All told there have been thousands and thousands of them.

The other day a batch of such sidetracked epistles was found stuck in the mail chute of a New York office building. There were 25 letters and one postcard. Since the sticking began undoubtedly hundreds of thousands of letters had dropped down that chute and had gone in an orderly way to their respective destinations. But the obstructive factor, whatever it was, had caught and held one now and then. For more than a quarter of a century the snag had been performing its occasional work of interference; the postcard was dated Dec. 11, 1903.

There is no possible way of estimating the total amount of damage done by the failure of those 25 letters to reach their addressees. And conversely, of course, we can not guess how much good may have come from the mail chute's meddling with destiny. But including the postcard here are 26 bits of raw material for the weaving of 26 imaginative yarns of competent authors—real O. Henry stuff. Tremendous trifles, as they might be called by G. R. Chesterton. And trifles, as we have long been aware, may have vast, far-reaching consequences. For all we know, the whole history of humanity may have been altered by that mail chute. But we sort of suspect that everything is just about the same as it would have been if the 25 letters and the postcard had gone right through—Providence Journal.

The Stars Say—

Sunday, Nov. 1

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of lively activities in many directions, although these may not be read as benignant, excepting for those engaged in literary or other cultural pursuits. There may be much disturbance, excitement, and commotion, calling for calm deliberation and discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active year, with much of profit in literary pursuits or certain lines of business, but generally there is forecast much excitement, unrest, agitation and unforeseen conflict and frustration. With calmness, discretion, resolution and perspicacity affairs may be maneuvered to moderate success. Curb tongue and temper. A child born on this day may be talented, versatile and ambitious, but prone to excitement, clamor, unrest and strife unless disciplined in infancy.

Notable Nativity: J. W. Packard, manufacturer.

Monday, Nov. 2

Monday's astrological forecast is for extremely lively and interesting developments both in matters of business enterprise as well as in domestic, social and affectional relations. All the orcs and faculties may be found under excellent stimuli to aggressive measures in business and high pressure in the social or friendly engagements.

Those whose birthday it is may plan for a year in which the spirit of enterprise and initiative may be used to good advantage. There is sign of highly quickened energies to be exerted in bold strokes in business and in the ardent attainment of the ambitions and aspirations in purely personal matters. Social, domestic and romantic affections may be under fine impetus for promoting friendly and pleasant intercourse. A child born on this day should be energetic, ambitious and resourceful as well as socially inclined and popular.

Notable Nativity: Warren C. Harding, Ex-President of United States.

Do Not Neglect Chronic Ills.

If a man is taken suddenly ill, he consults a doctor. The severity of the symptoms makes him seek aid. When the ailment, regardless of its cause, lingers on for a long time, there is a tendency to neglect it. The victim gets used to the symptoms and tries to forget the trouble.

As a result of negligence, many diseases become chronic. The term "chronic disease" is given to any ailment that has persisted over a long period of time, for months or years.

At a recent medical meeting, it was estimated that 2 per cent of the population is constantly sick. It was stated that the economic loss resulting from chronic illness has been fixed at about $45,000,000 per year. I cannot understand why, in spite of the vast amount of suffering and unhappiness caused by chronic diseases, so many persons continue their neglect.

Frequently, one who suffers from a chronic disease has no pain. Since pain is not present, the physician is not consulted. This is an unfortunate attitude to take. You should

NEW YORK Day by Day

by O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Any time there is a loose drunk in a cafe and I am dining there, sooner or later he will be pulling up a chair to mine. And I will hear how unhappy he is married, how many millions he lost in the crash or what a big bum I am.

I never escape. There is something about me—doubtless, my frankly open countenance—that will draw a souse, as steel springs to magnet, from rollicking companions across the room either to weep on my shoulder or to inquire what the soandso I mean answering at him?

As a matter of fact I neither look left nor right. I have never even seen a waiter's face. A timid mouse nibbling at cheese could not be more unobtrusive than I in a public dining room. Nor could Lord Fauntleroy himself be more the perfect little gentleman.

If anyone kicks my chair in passing I make out it's my fault. If I am brought something I did not order I wouldn't complain for anything. I do not add up my check for fear it will hurt someone's feeling. And tip-fee out so as not to disturb other customers.

Yet in spite of this I'm forever getting into hot water when eating out. In the Victor Hugo in Los Angeles one evening a lady lost her purse. I was several tables away and when the search began I got up, just as a gesture, to shake my self like a wet dog. And if I wasn't sitting on it!

In the old Gerdes in Cincinnati one after midnight I sat alone enjoying a bowl of hot milk and crackers. And trying to figure a cure shot at Latonia. The next I knew firemen were walking me Spanish through the basement. The place had been afire a half hour.

Then there was the moonlit evening Mike Hogg and I wandered into a dining room in Palm Beach. We ate what was served, supposing it a table d'hôte meal, and were having a second helping of dessert when a gavel tapped. We suddenly found ourselves uninvited guests at an undertakers' banquet.

Such dining out horrors were refreshed in memory by an experience last night. It was in a garishly lit place off Broadway. There was one of those walking-around stews in circulation again, too. So far as I could see he was in love with everybody in the place with one exception. I was naturally that exception. I happened to be wearing a sky-blue shirt and collar with darker blue tie and handkerchief to match. Steadying himself and bestowing an appraising glance he mumbled "All in blue"—and lurched on.

That was o. k. with me. I'm used to a beating about what I wear. I can take it. Anyway I was having

Ousted President

Demands of students, workers and radicals for a voice in public affairs culminated in a bloodless revolution in Paraguay, South America, and the ousting from office of President Jose Guggiari (above). He was succeeded by Vice-President Gonzales Navero, who is making an effort to keep the Liberal party in power with the aid of all the troops at his command.

an affair with the best pair of lamb chops I ever tasted. But it didn't satisfy him. In ten minutes he was in again, "Lissen Little Boy. Blue." he began, "don't you know you'll go plumb to rack and ruin drinking all that lead tea?" And I laughed that off—from the teeth out.

Teetering and holding to a chair he inquired: "Mind if I sit?" I didn't mind if he did lots of things, including a nip up off the Empire tower, but I nodded welcome. Then he tried to light a cigaret and the way he handled a lighted match made me sigh that celluloid collars went out. Finally he located me again through a one eyed squint. "Why don't you," he inquired, "get yourself all beered up pretty like me and scottische or something. Don't be a hunk of cold potatoes all your life!"

Sometimes one is able to squelch a stew by upstagniness so I high toned: "Gentlemen should never pontificate over trivia in public cafes." Then I winked at my companion and continued my romance with a chop. He quit weaving at that one and sat as though completely benumbed. He was almost forgotten when I happened to look up and two tears were stealing down his cheeks. I'm one of those softies who melts at tears. I went over, patted his shoulder and said: "See here, old man, don't go on like that, everything—"

At that he struggled up, clenched his fist and rushed at me muttering: "Nobody is going to call my poor dead grandmother a dirty name." That explains the Human Cannon Ball many saw shooting through 49th street last evening. And was I going to town!

WHAT SHALL I GIVE THEM TO EAT

THREE meals a day—365 days in a year—what a lot of meals to plan—to cook—to serve!

And that isn't all of it. You have to buy food for those meals. Meat. Groceries. Vegetables. Fruits.

A big job! Not only does it take careful buying to keep within your food budget, but ingenuity to vary your menus so that they are nourishing, yet free from monotony.

However, you can simplify this feeding job by reading the advertisements that feature food products. In these times, food advertisements are most complete in information regarding the price of the product, its health value and its uses. Often the reading of one advertisement can furnish you with ideas—not only for dinner tonight, but for your breakfast tomorrow, and luncheon the day after.

How often you say, "What shall I give them to eat?" Read the advertisements and you'll find the answer.

The pages of this newspaper carry the advertisements of reliable merchants and reliable manufacturers. Read them—take advantage of the opportunities they offer.

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son. Mrs. Carstairs meets Fanchon at train explaining "But you're not Evelyn, are you.... You can't be....."

CHAPTER IX

Fanchon's heart turned over in her breast. The flush of excitement faded, and her golden skin was gray with shock. To have travelled so far upon her difficult road of deception, to have braced herself, to have dared so much and then with the first word of greeting to face defeat!

"You're not really Evelyn Howard you can't be," this tall, beautiful woman had said.

Thus, with the first speech between them Fanchon encountered, so she fancied, bewildered, frightened and ashamed, shame, disgrace—perhaps worse. A mental vision of courts, newspaper headlines, perhaps even bars wavered on the shuddering screen of her mind. She swayed back from Mrs. Carstairs'....stammering something.... a vain, mad protest.

Jennie Carstairs' arm went around her again, holding her in a close and comforting clasp. She said, quick, contritely.

"You're not really, Evelyn Howard—you can't be," this tall, beautiful woman had said

"Dear, I'm so sorry! I didn't mean to startle, to upset you. And after all you've been through! What an old idiot I am. Come, we'll go to the car. Let the porter take your little bag.... Your trunk won't come for several days, but we'll attend to all that."

Talking, she half led Fanchon out through the station and to crowds to the big parked car. The chauffeur jumped down from his seat, touched his cap, took the pitiful little borrowed suitcase and opened the door. Mechanically, Fanchon climbed in.

It was early evening. Fifth Avenue was at its best and loveliest under the slanting golden light. The car moved ahead smoothly, powerfully. A luxurious car, beautifully fitted.

Mrs. Carstairs still kept Fanchon's hand in hers. Fanchon, understanding nothing, still not comprehending the older woman's anxious greeting, felt the blood come back to her cheeks and her cold hands, in a great wave of relief. The tears which had been so foreign to her nature until the last desperate days on the coast, rose easily in reaction to her magnificent, strange eyes. She tried to smile at Mrs. Carstairs, realizing that, after all, no real danger threatened her as yet, but her soft red mouth shook. Mrs. Carstairs pressed the hand she held.

"How silly I was," she said again apologetically. "But I could not believe that anything as beautiful as you could belong in our family!"

So that was it. Fanchon flushed deeply, rose over gold. Mrs. Carstairs said, softly.

"What lovely coloring.... you didn't tell me.... your little letters were so stiff and funny. Dark hair, blue eyes, you said, I had only the little snapshot to go on." She looked in her flat handbag and drew out a worn little photograph.... "see?"

Fanchon looked and felt her heart constrict again. There they dark curls. She was aughing. Fanchon herself stood at the boat rail, bareheaded, the breeze in her dark curls. She was laughing Evelyn, rather prim in a sweater suit, stood behind her.

"I see now," Mrs. Carstairs said laughing, "what a foolish mistake for me to make! It is really a very good likeness. But I thought the other girl was—you. You said.... 'the girl on the left.' So it was your mistake as well, my dear."

Fanchon said, low, and as steadily as she could.

"That was idiotic of me," said Mrs. Carstairs, looking at Evelyn Howard abstractedly. "Is well enough. In fact, I thought that in her features I could see a trace, just a suggestion of your mother's."

She sighed and her face clouded. "Oh, Evelyn," she cried, suddenly, "have you forgiven me, forgiven us all for our outrageous treatment of her.... and of you?"

"Of course," said Fanchon, moved by the appeal in the blue eyes.

"You," said Mrs. Carstairs, "haven't the least look of May about you. You are much lovelier than she ever was. Perhaps," she added with an effort, "you are like your father's people?"

"I have heard so," Fanchon said, honestly and took a deep breath of relief. She was still trembling a little from reaction.

"I won't," her aunt said, low, "ask you anything about the accident. It is too close to you now. Later, perhaps, when you feel more like telling me? I was half insane when the wire reached me, with gratitude, with a realization of what might so easily have been." She smiled, waveringly, and saw how Fanchon shivered at the mention of the disaster.

"We'll be home soon," Mrs. Carstairs said, "and you're to go to bed

CHURCH OF OUR SAVIOUR

870 East State st. Rev. Christian A. Roth, pastor.

Sunday services: Sunday, Nov. 1st the 22 Sunday after Trinity as well as All Saints day. Celebration of the Holy Communion 7:30. Church school 9:30. Second celebration of the Holy Eucharist and sermon 11.

It is related that Edison said on his death-bed "How beautiful it is over there." An infinitely greater One said to the dying thief, "Today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." We need not the testimony of men for the witness of God is greater. Paradise is open now. We look in and see those who were dear to us on earth. When death takes our loved ones from us our grief should not be selfish we should think not where they were but where they are; not of the desolate room, the vacant chair and the lonely home but of Paradise. They are conscious there and are with Christ. They are not yet in heaven, for heaven is the palace of which Paradise, as the name imports, is the park. They are developing there. There are imperfections in the holiest of Christians. There are wood and lay and stubble, built upon the true foundation, Christ; and, while the foundation will remain, the faulty superstructure must be taken away, and that not by one arbitrary act of God but in a manner consistent with the identity and personality of man. But despite all this, may because of all this, the faithful departed are blessed. They are in the Hand of the Lord and there shall no torment touch them.

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN

East State st. at Woodland ave. Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.

Reformation Sunday of Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity. Sunday school 9:45 (Galatians 5:13-26). H. E. Smith, supt.

"The Holy Scriptures do not encourage excess in any phase of living. All these are to be done decently and in order. Temperance is a rule of life that God has given to His people and expects it to be carried out. There have been enthusiasts for the principles of temperance since the beginning of time. There have been opponents of these principles from that same early era."

"This, however, does not belittle the ideals that God would have us carry out. The laws of God will always meet opposition. This is only a sure testimony that evil will be placed against good until the day of judgment. Temperance is a Christian principle that does not bear contradiction."

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one way to heaven, harmony, and Christ in divine Science shows us this way. It is to know no other reality—to have no other consciousness of life—than good, God and His reflection, and to rise superior to the so-called pain and pleasure of the senses." (p. 242).

NAVY LEAGUE HUNTS FRIENDS

The Navy League, a private organization, has foregone discretion and insulted President Hoover in a statement condemning the administration's naval policy. The league has accused Mr. Hoover of allowing humanitarian and Pacific intentions to lead him into exhibiting an "abysmal ignorance" of why navies are maintained. His proposal to immunize seaborne food supplies
during war time, if carried out,
would make "for bigger and bloodier wars," the league accuses. It declares that the American naval policy is being "subordinated" to the policies of other naval powers.

This is the navy league's way of hunting for friends out in the great beyond where people never see ships, except in pictures, and wonder, when they hear the phrase
"big navy," who the United States is preparing to fight. The league must actually believe that the public is going to jump up and down in admiration for its impudence to the chief executive of the nation.
Certainly nothing less than that could have tempted it into making such a rash play for favor.

It will be disappointed. The people haven't anything in particular to hold against the navy league, but they don't like the tone of its accusation that President Hoover has no right to make decisions about naval affairs. They can easily muster
a round of applause for Mr.
Hoover's demand that the navy league spokesman apologize for his accusation. If there's going to be a fight in Washington between the President and the "big navy" group, the "hinterlands" will line up behind the men they elected to run the government, not the private group that is trying to run him.
The people haven't anything against the navy, but they are developing a hearty dislike for the navy league.

LOST LETTERS

Now and then something occurs to arouse fresh speculation as to how far events may be changed by the failure of letters to reach their intended recipients. Here was the old song, "And the letter that he longed for never came." If our memory is good there was tragedy of a sort in that affair. Errant missives! All told there have been thousands and thousands of them.

The other day a batch of such sidetracked epistles was found stuck in the mail chute of a New York office building. There were 25 letters and one postcard. Since the sticking began undoubtedly hundreds of thousands of letters had dropped down that chute and had gone in an orderly way to their respective destinations. But the obstructive factor, whatever it was,
had caught and held one now and then. For more than a quarter of a century the snag had been performing its occasional work of interference; the postcard was dated
Dec. 11, 1903.

There is no possible way of estimating the total amount of damage done by the failure of those 25
letters to reach their addressees.
And conversely, of course, we can not guess how much good may have come from the mail chute's meddling with destiny. But including the postcard here are 26 bits of raw material for the weaving of 26 imaginative yarns of competent authors—real O. Henry stuff. Tremendous trifles, as they might be called by G. R. Chesterton. And trifles, as we have long been aware,
may have vast, far-reaching consequences. For all we know, the whole history of humanity may have been altered by that mail chute. But we sort of suspect that everything is just about the same as it would have been if the 25
letters and the postcard had gone right through—Providence Journal.

The Stars Say—

Sunday, Nov. 1

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of lively activities in many directions, although these may not be read as benignant, excepting for those engaged in literary or other cultural pursuits. There may be much disturbance, excitement and commotion, calling for calm deliberation and discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very active year, with much of profit in literary pursuits or certain lines of business, but generally there is forecast much excitement, unrest, agitation and unforeseen conflict and frustration.
With calmness, discretion, resolution and perspicacity affairs may be maneuvered to moderate success. Curb tongue and temper. A child born on this day may be talented, versatile and ambitious,
but prone to excitement, clamor,
unrest and strife unless disciplined
in infancy.

Notable Nativity: J. W. Packard,
manufacturer.

Monday, Nov. 2

Monday's astrological forecast is for extremely lively and interesting developments both in matters of business enterprise as well as in domestic, social and affectional relations. All the orcs and faculties may be found under excellent stimuli to aggressive measures in business and high pressure in the social or friendly engagements.

Those whose birthday it is may
plan for a year in which the spirit of enterprise and initiative may be used to good advantage. There is sign of highly quickened energies to be exerted in bold strokes in business and in the ardent attainment of the ambitions and aspirations in purely personal matters.

Social, domestic and romantic affiliations may be under fine impulses for promoting friendly and pleasant intercourse. A child born on this day should be energetic,
ambitious and resourceful as well
as socially inclined and popular.

Notable Nativity: Warren C.
Harding, Ex-President of United States.

Do Not Neglect Chronic Ills.

If a man is taken suddenly ill,
he consults a doctor. The severity of the symptoms makes him seek aid. When the ailment, regardless of its cause, lingers on for a long time, there is a tendency to neglect it. The victim gets used to the symptoms

and tries to forget the trouble.

As a result of negligence, many diseases become chronic. The term
"chronic disease" is given to any ailment
that has persisted
over a long period of time, for months or years.

At a recent medical meeting, it was estimated that 2 per cent of the population is constantly sick. It was stated that the economic loss resulting from chronic illness has been fixed at about $45,000,000 per year. I cannot understand why, in spite of the vast amount of suffering and unhappiness caused by chronic diseases, so many persons continue their neglect.

Frequently, one who suffers from a chronic disease has no pain. Since pain is not present, the physician is not consulted. This is an unfortunate attitude to take. You should

Governor-General of the Philip-will formally request the President

not regard pain as the only possible symptom of trouble.

Men have died of heart disease
who never had pain in the heart.
Many have died of diabetes and never had pain. Cancer can start and go on for years without causing any pain.

Statistics show us that the health of many an individual is wrecked
by rheumatism due to infected teeth. The original trouble did not cause pain because the roots had been killed.

High blood pressure, another common symptom of disease, can go on for years without causing any pain. Many cases of tuberculosis exist for months without any sign of pain.

Unfortunately, many people believe in the old saying, "Never trouble trouble until trouble troubles
you." Their attitude is that if there is anything the matter with them,
they do not want to know of it.
This is not a sign of courage, it is acting too much like the ostrich who hides his head when the en-

see his enemy he imagines himself

NEW YORK, Oct. 31—Any time
there is a loose drunk in a cafe and I am dining there, sooner or later he will be pulling up a chair to mine. And I will hear how unhappily he is married, how many millions he lost in the crash or what a big bum I am.

I never escape. There is something about me—doubtless my frankly open countenance—that will draw a souse, as steel springs to magnet, from rollicking com-pansions across the room either to my shoulder or to inquire what the scoundrel I mean snoring at him?

As a matter of fact I neither look left nor right. I have never even seen a waiter's face. A timid mouse nibbling at cheese could not be more unobtrusive than I in a public dining room. Nor could Lord Fauntleroy himself be more the perfect little gentleman.

If anyone kicks my chair in passing I make out it's my fault. If I am brought something I did not order I wouldn't complain for anything. I do not add up my check for fear it will hurt someone's feeling. And I tip-ice out so as not to disturb other customers.

Yet in spite of this I'm forever getting into hot water when eating out. In the Victor Hugo in Los Angeles one evening a lady lost her purse. I was several tables away and when the search began I got up, just as a gesture, to shake my self like a wet dog. And if I wasn't sitting on it!

In the old Gerdes in Cincinnati
one after midnight I sat alone enjoying a bowl of hot milk and crackers. And trying to figure a sure shot at Latonia. The next I knew firemen were walking me Spanish through the basement. The place had been afire a half hour.

Then there was the moonlit evening Mike Hogg and I wandered into a dining room in Palm Beach. We ate what was served, supposing it a table d'hote meal, and were having a second helping of dessert
when a gavel tapped. We suddenly found ourselves uninvited guests at an undertakers' banquet.

Such dining out horrors were refreshed in memory by an experience last night. It was in a garishly lit place off Broadway. There was one of those walking-around stews in circulation again, too. So far as I could see he was in love with everybody in the place with one exception. I was naturally that exception. I happened to be wearing a sky-blue shirt and collar with darker blue tie and handkerchief to match. Steadying himself and bestowing an appraising glance he mumbled "All in blue"—and lurched out.

That was o. k. with me. I'm used to a beating about what I wear. I can take it. Anyway I was having

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son. Mrs. Carstairs meets Fanchon at train explaining "But you're not Evelyn, are you . . . You can't be . . ."

CHAPTER IX

Fanchon's heart turned over in her breast. The flush of excitement faded, and her golden skin was gray with shock. To have travelled so far upon her difficult road of deception, to have braced herself, to have dared so much and then with the first word of greeting to face defeat!

"You're not really Evelyn Howard, you can't be," this tall, beautiful woman had said.

Thus, with the first speech between them Fanchon encountered, so she fancied, bewildered, frightened and ashamed, shame, disgrace—perhaps worse. A mental vision of courts, newspaper headlines, perhaps even bars wavered on the shuddering screen of her mind. She swayed back from Mrs. Carstairs . . . stammering something . . . a vain, mad protest.

Jennie Carstairs' arm went around her again, holding her in a close and comforting clasp. She said, quick, centrically.

"You're not really Evelyn Howard—you can't be," this tall, beautiful woman had said

"Dear, I'm so sorry! I didn't mean to startle, to upset you. And after all you've been through! What an old idiot I am. Come, we'll go to the car. Let the porter take your little bag. Your trunk won't come for several days, but we'll attend to all that."

Talking, she half led Fanchon out through the station and to crowds to the big parked car. The chauffeur jumped down from his seat, touched his cap, took the pitiful little borrowed suitcase and opened the door. Mechanically, Fanchon climbed in.

It was early evening. Fifth Avenue was at its best and loveliest under the slanting golden light. The car moved ahead smoothly, powerfully. A luxurious car, beautifully fitted.

Mrs. Carstairs still kept Fanchon's hand in hers. Fanchon, understanding nothing, still not comprehending the older woman's curious greeting, felt the blood come back to her cheeks and her cold hands, in a great wave of relief. The tears which had been so foreign to her nature until the last desperate days on the coast, rose easily in reaction to her magnificent, strange eyes. She tried to smile at Mrs. Carstairs, realizing that, after all, no real danger threatened her as yet, but her soft red mouth shook. Mrs. Carstairs pressed the hand she held.

So that was it. Fanchon flushed deeply, rose over gold. Mrs. Carstairs said, softly.

"What lovely coloring . . . you didn't tell me . . . your little letters were so stiff and funny. Dark hair, blue eyes, you said, I had only the little snapshot to go on." She looked in her flat handbag and drew out a worn little photograph.

Fanchon looked and felt her heart constrict again. There they were, dark curls. She was aching. Fanchon herself stood at the boat rail, bareheaded, the breeze in her dark curls. She was laughing. Evelyn, rather prim in a sweater suit, stood behind her.

"I see now," Mrs. Carstairs said laughing, "what a foolish mistake for me to make! It is really a very good likeness. But I thought the other girl was—you. You said 'The girl on the left.' So it was your mistake as well, my dear."

Fanchon said, low, and as steadily as she could.

"That was idiotic of me."

"Well, never mind. She," said Mrs. Carstairs, looking at Evelyn Howard abstractedly, "is well enough. In fact, I thought that in her features I could see a trace, just a suggestion of your mother's."

She sighed and her face clouded.

"Oh, Evelyn," she cried, suddenly, "have you forgiven me, forgiven us all for our outrageous treatment of her . . . and of you?"

"Of course," said Fanchon, moved by the appeal in the blue eyes.

"You," said Mrs. Carstairs, "haven't the least look of May about you. You are much lovelier than she ever was. Perhaps," she added with an effort, "you are like your father's people?"

"I have heard so," Fanchon said, honestly and took a deep breath of relief. She was still trembling a little from reaction.

"I won't," her aunt said, low, "ask you anything about the accident. It . . . is too close to you now. Later, perhaps, when you feel more like telling me? I was half insane when the wire reached me, with gratitude, with a realization of what might so easily have been."

She smiled, waveringly and saw how Fanchon shivered at the mention of the disaster.

"We'll be home soon," Mrs. Carstairs said, "and you're to go to bed and rest for several days."

"The doctor said so," Fanchon admitted.

"I know he did. Good man, he wired me, quite on his own, and gave his orders. But I would have insisted anyway."

"She came up to the apartment to meet you. We are, as I wrote you, settled in Southampton for the summer. I was anxious for you to get here as quickly as possible as I wish to entertain for you, when you are strong enough. In the autumn you shall be presented to society in New York and have a season here. Next spring, we may go abroad together. Would you like that, Evelyn?" she asked with wistfulness.

"I'd love it," said Fanchon, softly.

Oh, she thought, what a miserable coward I am! She looked about her frantically. She had expected to meet consideration, kindness, gentleness. She could have faced that, could have rendered something in return, for a measure, a time, of safety. But to encounter this warmth of seeking, asking, wistful affection was almost more than she could endure; it was something she had so longed for since her father's death; something she had longed for all her life as well. Dear as her father had been to her, she had always dreamed silently and secretly of a gracious, beautiful understanding mother. And here was such a woman, the perfect answer to those childish dreams. But she was taking what was offered her under the most hideous of false pretenses. She thought of Evelyn, of the shattered little body, gray now perhaps to its lonely grave, surrounded by strangers. She put both hands to her face and shook with pity and despair and hatred of herself.

"My dear," said Mrs. Carstairs, gently, "I realize the strain you have been through. You must try and forget. And all the vanished years beside. You must begin all over again. With me."

Fanchon murmured something—"so terribly kind," she said.

"Kind! As if I could make up for all the years of neglect and unkindness," Jennie Carstairs told her strongly. "I never can. It is you who are kind, Evelyn. If you knew how I have longed all my life, for a daughter! Collin is the best son in the world but most women want daughters. . . . I miss you, a little to dress, to spoil a bit. I've always wanted a daughter."

She said, "You know . . . did your mother tell you?—that Collin was a twin? The other twin died a dear little girl! Thirty years ago, but I've never forgotten," she said. "It was shortly after that that we went to England and France to live . . . Your uncle," she added, "was very kind, he understood. I was not young at the time, I was thirty or so, and I knew I would have no more children. It was a great blow to me . . . to us both."

Services Sunday Nov. 1st the 22 Sunday after Trinity as well as All Saints day. Celebration of the Holy Communion. 7:30. Church school 9:30. Second celebration of the Holy Eucharist and sermon 11.

It is related that Edison said on his death-bed "How beautiful it is over there." An infinitely greater One said to the dying thief, "Today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." We need not the testimony of men for the witness of God is greater. Paradise is open now. We look in and see those who were dear to us on earth. When death takes our loved ones from us our grief should not be selfish. We should think not where they were but where they are; not of the desolate room, the vacant chair and the lonely home but of Paradise. They are conscious there and are with Christ. They are not yet in heaven, for heaven is the palace of which Paradise, as the name imports, is the park. They are developing there. There are imperfections in the holiest of Christians. There are wood and lay and stubble, built upon the true foundation, Christ; and, while the foundation will remain, the faulty superstructure must be taken away, and that not by one arbitrary act of God but in a manner consistent with the identity and personality of man. But our spite all this, may because of all this, the faithful departed are blessed. They are in the Hand of the Lord and there shall no torment touch them.

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN

East State st. at Woodland ave. Rev. George D. Keister, pastor.

Reformation Sunday of Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity. Sunday school 9:45 (Galatians 5:13-26). H. E. Smith, supt.

"The Holy Scriptures do not encourage excess in any phase of living. All these are to be done decently and in order. Temperance is a rule of life that God has given to His people and expects it to be carried out. There have been enthusiasts for the principles of temperance since the beginning of time. There have been opponents of these principles from that same early era."

"This, however, does not belittle the ideals that God would have us carry out. The laws of God will always meet opposition. This is only a sure testimony that evil will be placed against good until the day of judgment. Temperance is a Christian principle that does not bear contradiction."

The Bible selections include the following from Proverbs (11:19, 21): "As righteousness tendeth to life: so he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death. . . . Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered."

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one way to heaven, harmony, and Christ in divine Science shows us this way. It is to know no other reality—to have no other consciousness of life—than good, God and His reflection, and to rise superior to the so-called pain and pleasure of the senses." (p. 242).

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeanette Young Norton

Some of the elegant soups served by fine chefs in hotels and clubs are quite simple to prepare by the average home cook, and they give tone to otherwise simple meals. Of course, a substantial soup should never precede an equally substantial main course. But a delicate bisque might well be part of a special dinner.

Here is an Italian delicacy that has the ever-popular thin custard foundation of native chefs. One encounters this mixture in soups, sauces and desserts, and they are so ingenious in the matter of flavoring that always it is delicate and delightful.

Chicken Soup, Italiane

2 cups clear chicken broth.
8 egg yolks.
Salt, pepper.
Cooking sherry.
Place the egg yolks in a double boiler, beat and gradually add the chicken broth. Whip with an egg beater while cooking and when the mixture thickens, remove from the fire, and serve at once in cups. Add a little sherry to each cup, if available.

Sea Food Bisque
1 cup meat of lobster, crab or shrimp.
3 cups scalded milk.
1 cup sweet cream.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 tablespoon flour.
1 teaspoon salt.
Dash of paprika.
Melt butter in saucepan, add scalded milk, carefully watching to flour and stir in gradually the prevent it from boiling. When the mixture is smooth and slightly thickened, add the cooked flaked shellfish and continue cooking a moment longer to heat through. Remove from the fire, fold in the whipped cream and pour into bouillon cups.

TO THE VOTERS OF SALEM:—

At this time I wish to clear the misunderstanding which seems to exist in regard to the legality of my candidacy for Auditor. Before announcing myself a candidate for that office, I took the matter up with the members of the Board of Elections, and they informed me that it would be legal to have my name written on the ballot.

In order to vote for me, it will be necessary to write the name of Helen Woerther on the ballot in the space "For Auditor" and mark it with the usual "X". The name can be written in either the Democrat or Republican space.

During my past administration as City Auditor, I have been able to save the taxpayers thousands of dollars on various bond issues. On the Disposal Plant Bond Issue alone I was able to save $9,500.00.

I am always ready to serve the taxpayers by giving out any information that is available in the Auditor's Office. My records are always open for public inspection.

If re-elected, I will continue to conduct my office in the courteous and efficient way.

PRESIDENT HOOVER congratulated Kemal Pasha, ruler of Turkey, on the Turkish Republic birthday.

Kemal deserves congratulation for wiping out much nonsense, veils on women's faces, control of human beings on earth by a religious personage, supposed to represent the prophet, Mohammed, and especially for ending the rule of viciously corrupt, cruel, and murderous sultan.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

NATION MOURNS SHERIDAN

THE DEATH of Cadet Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Jr., star end of the Army football team as the result of injury sustained in the Yale game, lacked some of the tremendous hysterical aftermath that has attended the nation's mourning of the youth's passing but the world of sport experiences such few of similar fatalities that even the death of such a prominent star does little to football's popularity.

Military academy officials have decided that there will be no cancellation of games. This, one believes is a most wise move for the calling off of a schedule after a death, as has been the case on similar occasions, has been without profit to anyone. Such a move signifies respect for the deceased but even the victims would not wish to cause, through his passing, cancellation of pending contests.

Football authorities have learned in past years that the game is not without danger. However, out of thousands of games played annually the death rate is exceedingly low. Minor injuries are numerous but they are the exception and not the rule as in football of 20 years ago.

SHERIDAN's death was definitely pitiable. It was lamented by the most cautious fan and throughout the east, where the tragedy was felt more than in other sections, conversation was concentrated more on the lad's passing than on the result of hundreds of important college and high school contests.

Regarded as a contributing cause to the tragedy was the "flying wedge" formation on the kick-off, and almost every team, college high school, in America, uses it. The receiver runs behind a wedge of teammates massed into an inverted "V."

Rule-makers at their next session in New York City are certain to consider abolishment of the kick-off wedge. Also, it is reported, will consider elimination of the kick-off but the latter step if adopted, will harm football more than any other legislation possibly could. What thrill in football can compare to the opening play of the game, when both teams are lined up, waiting for the whistle that marks start of action?

Ohio State Favored Over Hoosiers In Annual Battle Today

(By Associated Press) BLOOMINGTON, IND., Oct. 31.—Ohio State's fast, heavy team was the favorite over Indiana university in their big ten football game before a homecoming crowd here today. The Buckeyes were seeking to avenge their defeat by Northwestern last week, while the Hoosiers had not yet lost a big ten game.

A two-day rain that soaked the memorial stadium gridiron caused trepidation in both camps. Indiana feared for its aerial attack, while Coach Sam Williamson of Ohio State pointed out his players had not yet played in mud. The Buckeye line outweighed its opponents' six pounds to the man.

Ed Beck Gets Winning Touchdown in Second Period on Trick Play

vanced four yards in two downs then were held without a gain, to lose the ball to the Quakers.

The contest opened with Kesler kicking off to French who ran 15 yards to his own 35. A pass on the next play was incomplete and Beck punted 40 yards to Wellsville's 36. Weekley failed to gain but on the next play skirted end for a 23-yard gain. He lost two yards on two successive tries at the line and a pass was incomplete. Weekley punted 40 yards to Carpenter who was stopped on his own 21.

French Gains Nine

French snatched guard for nine yards and Carpenter made it first down with a four yard gain. Beck added five and Keyes smashed his way through the big Bengal line to advance the ball 18 yards to the Wellsville 46. Carpenter slipped and lost two, French gained four and a pass failed. Beck kicked out of bounds on the nine yard line.

Wellsville started down the gridiron towards the Quaker-duck but was halted through brilliant work of the Salem line and the period ended with the home-town holding the ball on their own 11.

On a bad pass from center Beck lost nine and Carpenter gained six of the yards back. Backed behind his own goal-line, Beck booted a beautiful spiral 48 yards to Pettrela who advanced it nine to the 39. A series of slashing end runs advanced the ball to the eight where the Salem line braced and

STUBBERS TRIM MASSILLON IN ONE-SIDED TILT

Stuebenville Registers 17th Straight Victory By 68-0 Score

STUEBENVILLE, Oct. 31.—Stuebenville Wells High school registered its 17th straight victory and its sixth win of the season here last night, romping over a fighting, plucky but inadequate Massillon eleven, 68 to 0.

With the front wall of the Stubbers big red forces clicking every play, Burgwin and August took turns in scampering across the Tigers goal line, the dusky lad going over six times and the stocky Polish boy going over five times, twice after intercepting Massillon passes.

Burgwin reeled off two jaunts of 60 yards each and had such other short ones as 20 on up to 40. Stuebenville took an early lead, amassing 12 points the opening period. They added 19 in the second, 18 in the third and 19 in the final. Stuebenville's goal was never in danger and moreover the Tigers scored but four first downs to the Stubbers 25. Defense work of Ryball and Coleman, Stuebenville, was outstanding.

The most spectacular work for Massillon was done by Clendenning, right half, who attempted a passing attack which brought some consolation to his players had not yet played in mud. The Buckeye line outweighed its opponents' six pounds to the man.

Substitutions were numerous for both teams.

New Welter Champ

A fighting pose of Lou Worcester, the French-Canadian Worcester, Mass., battler, who astounded boxing experts by his easy 15-round victory over the then welterweight champion, Young Jack Thompson, at Boston recently. The practically unknown Brouillard intends to wage a busy campaign, even though he holds the title. His first battle as champ will be against Jackie Fields, in Boston.

the locals took the ball on downs.

Salem Threatens

Beck again booted out of danger and Wellsville took the ball on the Quakers' 39. Two line plunges were halted and a pass heaved by Pettrela, was intercepted by French who ran nine yards to his own 30. Beck gained two and Carpenter's nine yard run made it a first down. French added four more and a pass was incomplete.

The teams exchanged punts after which the Quakers launched another offensive drive, started by a 20-yd dash by Carpenter and short runs by Beck, Keyes and French. A pass, French to Beck, gained 20 yards and brought the ball to the 14-yd line as the period neared the end. Another pass was incomplete and on the next play the Quakers worked to perfection their new trick aerial with Capt. Beck feeling his way across the line for the score.

Keyes Kicks 53 Yards

Wellsville held a slight edge in third quarter action but long distance punts by Beck continually kept the Tigers out of scoring distance. A 52-yd punt by Keyes, two runs of better than 2 yards by Beck and long bucks by French were features of the period for Salem while Kesler's 16-yd run was his team's best effort.

Salem outplayed the Bengals in the fourth quarter and started on the way for another score when French plunged his way for 18 yards, to bring the ball to the opposition's 24. Carpenter hit the line for six but a pass gave the ball to Wellsville when Referee Howell ruled illegal interference by Salem when a visitor attempted to intercept the pass.

Salem, after a punt, started another touchdown excursion with runs by Keyes and Carpenter advancing the pigskin to Wellsville's 19. There Roberts, the outstanding lineman on the field, intercepted a pass to halt the final scoring threat of the contest.

Quakers Penalized

Beck's run of 15 yards after his team was penalized for illegal use of hands on offense was the highlight of the final five minutes of play. Wellsville started a barrage of aerials that went for naught as the Salem defenses smothered would-be receivers with an absolute completeness.

McClain, of minute physical proportions smaller than any other player on the field, and each of the Tigers' other three backs played great offensively but, despite great advantages given them by superior weight of the visitors' forward wall, failed to outshine the Quaker out-fight. Every Salem man shared honors in the victory.

Smarter Team Wins

It was another case of the smarter team being declared the victor. Wellsville repeatedly registered first downs when in its own territory, slashed and circumvented the Salem defense for long runs, but was held helpless when gains might have meant scores. In total yardage gained Salem held a slight edge, statistics show, but the game was as evenly fought as any might ever be.

The contest was a clean affair, too, with Salem getting 35 yards in penalties to Wellsville's 10. It again brought out superior strength of the Salem line, a fine offensive combination that ranks with the best in the school's history, and all-around power that is destined to bring great fame to the school.

Rookies To Replace Veterans On World Champion Team In 1932; Several Changes Loom

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 31.—The roster of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals will contain several new names when spring training starts at Brandenton, Fla., in March.

Youngsters from the extensive farm system are slated to replace at least six team members.

Veterans To Lose Jobs

When Charles (Gabby) Street, manager, calls the roll next spring the following may be among those not present: Chick Hafey, Jim Bottomley, Flint Rhem, Andy High, Tony Kaufmann and Ernie Ottavelli.

Among those he plans to bring up are: Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, Tex Carleton, and Ray Starr, pitchers, and Pat Crawford, first baseman. There will be others, but Breadon is known to be counting on those four.

Hafey led the National league in batting last season, but he was a holdout because of a dispute over his salary until the season was well under way. His showing in the World series was disappointing. He batted only .167, as compared with .348 during the season.

Bottomley Series "Bust"

Bottomley's case is similar. He was the "bust" of the 1930 World Series. "Ripper" Jim Collins, a recruit took his first base job away from him and held it until injured in mid-season. After Bottomley came back he batted sensationally, but again fell down in the World series.

Bottomley was only a fraction of a point behind Hafey in the season batting averages, but hit weakly in the series. His fielding was little short of sensational, however. Breadon thinks Collins is a coming star, and he plans to bring Crawford up as his understudy.

Rogers Hornsby, Chicago Cubs manager, has tried several times to purchase Bottomley. He frankly wants him with the Cubs and is reported to have offered $50,000 cash for him.

Rhem To Be Traded

Rhem had a fair season, but is due to be traded to make room for youngsters.

High was sent to Rochester, a Cardinal farm, last spring, but refused to report. He rounded out

Carlton Looks Good

Carlton, another pitcher with the Cardinals' Houston club in the Texas league, won 20 games and lost seven this season. Last year he won 20 and lost 9 for the same club.

Starr, who attracted attention by pitching and winning several double-headers for the Rochester club this season, is expected to follow in the footsteps of Paul Derringer, who came up from Rochester last year.

Crawford is touted as a sensational hitter and a capable first baseman. He hit .371 for Columbus in the American Association and was credited with more than 20 home runs last season.

South Bend Ramblers Continue Fight to Win National Grid Honors

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—North, south, east and west college football teams sailed forth again today to further clarify national and sectional championship alignments.

One outstanding candidate for national honors, Notre Dame was a distinct center of popular interest for the Ramblers were matched against Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh in one of the big-time struggles of the day.

Despite a heavy intersectional slate, particularly in the east, there was just as much interest in half a dozen crucial encounters with the east, the Big Ten, the southwest conference and the southern conference.

Unbeaten Teams Clash

In the east, two unbeaten and untied eleven, Cornell and Columbia were squared off against one another at Ithaca, N. Y. Yale's Bulldogs, improving fast, tackled Dartmouth's Indians; Holy Cross played Brown Lafayette sought to halt Penn; Pitt tangled with Penn State; Georgetown was opposed to Boston college and Villanova stacked up against the tough Bucknell bison.

In the south, a heavy conference schedule was topped by the meeting of Florida and Georgia's rampant Bulldogs. Tulane and Tennessee, co-leaders with Georgia, took things a bit easier against Mississippi A. and M. and Duke respectively. Vanderbilt anticipated victory against Georgia Tech and Alabama hoped to stop Kentucky unbeaten but tied by Maryland. Virginia Poly was Maryland's foe, and North Carolina played North Carolina state. Sewanee drew Louisiana State for another conference engagement.

Ohio Faces Indiana

In the big ten, the struggle between Wisconsin and Minnesota looked closest with Northwestern, Purdue and Ohio State favored over Illinois, Chicago, and Indiana respectively. Nebraska looked much too strong for Missouri in the big six and Oklahoma was favored over Iowa State despite the improvement in the Ames' outfit. Kansas went outside the conference to clash with Oklahoma A. and M.

Southern Methodist and Texas were pitted against each other in the southwest, featuring the only other conference game sending Texas Christian against Arkansas. In the Pacific coast conference, championship games involved Washington state and Oregon state on the one hand, and Stanford and the University of California at Los Angeles in the other. Colorado Aggies' struggle with the champion Utah Indians headlined the Rocky Mountain conference card; Brigham Young played Colorado teachers and western state tackled Denvers of the day.

Oregon Invades N. Y. U.

The national intersectional slate, in addition to Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech combat included games involving Oregon and New York University; Colorado college and Army; Virginia and Harvard; Michigan and Princeton; Kansas Aggies and West Virginia; Mississippi college and Colgate; Georgia State (Bowden) and Davis & Elkins, all in the east; Syracuse Bulldogs, improving fast, tackled Dartmouth's Indians; Holy Cross played Brown Lafayette sought to halt Penn; Pitt tangled with Penn State; Georgetown was opposed to Boston college and Villanova stacked up against the tough Bucknell bison.

ST. LOUIS—When Mrs. Fredericka Schmucker died here recently at 91, she left 115 direct descendants. Those who survived her were two sons, five daughters, 38 grandchildren and 70 great-grandchildren.
